Journey Into Nature and The Lives of Prehistoric People Two Programs for Senior Adults Illinois State Museum

The Illinois State Museum is pleased to offer two special slide presentations, free of charge, to senior adult groups in the Sangamon County area. Museum-trained senior adults will conduct these programs providing an insider's view of the Illinois State Museum's comprehensive exhibitions. Facilities such as senior centers, hospitals, retirement centers, nursing homes, and senior adult organizations are invited to schedule a program at their sites.

Topics

Interested groups may choose from two different slide presentations, based on availability. Each presentation will begin with a brief introduction to the Illinois State Museum followed by the program of choice. All slides represent views of the exhibitions. Additionally, the speakers will supplement their presentations with specimens and artifacts that may be handled and examined.

Journey Into Nature. A discussion of the six, life-size natural history habitats on the Museum's first floor. Each of the habitats represents a distinct location in Illinois as it appeared in the last century; four display animals that no longer live here.

The Lives of Prehistoric People. For thousands of years before Europeans arrived in Illinois, the region was inhabited by people with different cultures and life styles. The Museum's exhibition hall, "Peoples of the Past," features life-sized habitats recreating the ways of life of these prehistoric residents.

Scheduling

Presentations may be arranged for any time of the day, keeping in mind that the program will last approximately 45 minutes. Please allow at least three weeks for scheduling. You will receive written confirmation of the presentation as soon as arrangements have been completed. The Museum will provide the slide projector. Please arrange to have available a projection screen or a white wall, a room that can be darkened, and a small table on which to place the specimens or Indian artifacts.
